Mirror, Mirror

Mirror, Mirror on the wall,

Who's the creature I see in your glass, grand and yet so small?

It seems pretty and kind,

Seems pretty and kind, with a great mind,

Seems pretty and kind, with a great mind, - all its stars have aligned.

Mirror, Mirror on the wall,

Who's this strange creature I see in you and then on the floor, it crawls.

A creature with aligned stars is crawling on the floor,

Instead of claiming its crown with a mighty roar.

It's hiding behind curtains as the audience yells, "Encore."

Mirror, Mirror on the wall,

Who is this plastic toy creature I see in you, I cannot recall.

Its name is like a memory at the tip of my tongue.

Why does it seem so hopeless and young?

Like a lovelorn nomad in Paris, sighing as the joyous air burns its lungs.

Mirror, Mirror on the wall,

You must have answers. You are so wise and tall.

When I lift my fingers and hesitantly touch the cold glass,

Why do they tremble like a dry windy meadow's fearful grass?

When they intertwine with those of the creature, it is me and yet not me. Alas!

FROM DARKNESS TO LIGHT

The sun lay hidden behind velvet gray, As morning stumbled into a stormy day. The window wept with misty sighs,

While trees stood cloaked beneath low skies.

No colors bloomed, no light broke through The world felt silent, cold, and blue.

But then—appeared, without a care, A soul of summer, bold and bare.

No coat, no shield, no fear, no plea, Just barefoot joy beside the sea Of puddled roads and whispering leaves He danced as if the sky believes.

Rain kissed his cheeks, but still he spun, Like thunder bowed and clouds undone. His laughter soared, his spirit bright, And shadows melted into light.

The heavens paused, the earth stood still, To marvel at his fearless will.

As if the gods themselves had sent This dancer as their firmament.

With every step, the storm grew shy, The sun peeked out to paint the sky. From gloom to glory, dark to bright He turned the rain into pure light.
